

Country Church

When the congregation of St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church, Mishicot, was organized in 1861, it consisted mostly of German Lutherans from the rural area and services were totally in German. Now, however, according to the Rev. Herbert Kesting, pastor for 18 years, "we have a melting pot, mostly from the village." The church, at 325 Randolph St., is place of worship for 200 families, and Kesting, who has "retired," is also still serving Rockwood Lutheran Church until a new pastor is found. The present Wisconsin Synod church, with red granite facing, was dedicated in 1927. An educational wing was a major addition in 1972. Some 80 students are enrolled in Sunday School. Church architect was the Rev. Karl Koehler, former pastor.

(Photo by Michael J. Sibilsky)